Sandless refinishing for prefinished and site-finished hardwood and bamboo flooring

Hardwood flooring of any type or finish will need to be recoated at some point in its lifetime. Whether a wood or bamboo floor is site-finished or prefinished from the factory, years of foot traffic, pet scratches, sunlight, routine maintenance and other influences will reduce the floor's overall gloss and appearance.

Traditional methods for refinishing these floors require them to be sanded down to bare wood. This time-consuming, costly process is a dusty undertaking that is subject to the skill level of the refinisher.

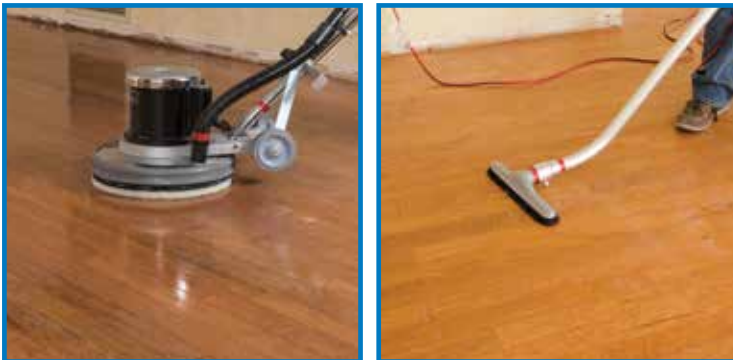

Some hardwood floors cannot be sanded, such as engineered wood floors that lack the surface veneer to accommodate the sanding process. Hand-scraped wood floors, as well, would lose their hard-earned texturing if the floor were to be sanded completely flat. Even a site-finished floor might not be able to take another sanding, if it has been refinished so many times that another pass would expose the fasteners.

For these circumstances and more, MAPEI's Ultracoat ReNewIt System of products allows a floor to be recoated simply and without sanding. Note that this system will not correct deep scratches or gouges, nor will it allow a change in the floor color. However, Ultracoat ReNewIt System will provide a new, well-bonded finish that recreates a new-floor look quickly and easily, without the risks and hassles of a full sanding and recoating.
